Online Post Lockdown Back to Work Discussion Groups for Gloucestershire Businesses

Gloucestershire-based Executive Coach & Mentor, Adrian Malpass, has been providing free online 'VirtualTable' sessions for businesses in Gloucestershire and the Cotswolds, helping them navigate the return to work post-lockdown as restrictions lift.

The first event, held on 9 June, looked at the important next steps to consider to enhance business stability, opportunity, and success with the return to work, from sales to purchases, and financial management to a team's mental health.

Adrian says: "I wanted to do something to support the local business community, who are so important to keeping our economy alive. The event was aimed at SME Directors and senior managers, and we met in a confidential online environment, where all those attending were encouraged to participate with the aim of delivering improved understanding and clarity."

Anne Sallis, of Anne Sallis Training and Consultancy, attended the event and found it useful for finding a clear way forward for her business. She commented "As a small business, it's massively important for me to stay connected at the moment with like-minded people who are willing to share experiences and best practice. Attending Adrian's Zoom meeting on 'Back to work: the next steps' gave me both of these things. Keeping the numbers small and the topic current made it a very worthwhile hour."

Jason Bolton, Managing Director of Beaufort Financial (Three Counties) Limited, used the session to help accelerate his business goals post-lockdown. He said, "The session was an excellent example of how we can use technology to bring people and their businesses together even in these challenging times. It was skilfully chaired by Adrian Malpass who enabled us to share our problems and concerns with and seek solutions from the group.

Adrian's next free 'VirtualTable' session takes place on 14 July at 10am online and is entitled: Adapting to the new business future. Businesses can register to participate in this discussion here: <https://amvirtualtable140720.eventbrite.co.uk>, or by contacting Adrian through his website or calling his office (below).
